Eva Yung is an associate in Axinn's Litigation group. Her experience includes matters involving complex contractual disputes, antitrust issues, unfair and deceptive practices, and defamation. She specializes in breaking down complicated legal issues and fact patterns into manageable and successful strategies in a variety of contexts, such as multidistrict litigation and sprawling class actions. She has also taken leading roles in internal investigations and advised international clients on sanctions, FCPA and anti-terrorism law issues, as well as whistleblower guidelines and risk assessments. Outside of commercial litigation, she has also taken on immigration matters at the agency and appellate levels.

Prior to joining Axinn, Eva practiced in the litigation department of a global law firm. She earned her JD from New York University School of Law and received her BA in History and Science, magna cum laude, from Harvard University. While in law school, Eva interned at the Immigrant Rights Clinic of Washington Square Legal Services Inc.
