will speak on the Canadian Bar Association's Competition Law and Foreign Investment Review Section's webinar titled "A Check-in on the Structural Presumption: What Have We Learned and Where Are We Headed?"

With the structural presumption amendments to Canada's Competition Act in effect for nearly a year, the panel will explore the practical impact to date, what this means for future merger reviews, and implications for how businesses and their advisors are navigating these developments. James will offer his comparative insights on how U.S. enforcers and courts use structural presumptions in merger reviews and litigated challenges.
